FARM FIELD DAY AT WATERFORD, JULY 27

Aaltonen to Speak on "Farmers' Cooperation"—Sports in Forenoon—Picnic Lunch

"Farmers' Cooperation" will be the subject of an address by Frank Aaltonen, Groveton, N. H., to be delivered at the joint field day of the Oxford County Farm Bureau, United Parish, and 4-H Clubs, Wednesday, July 27. The outing will be at Round's field at Waterford Flat which borders on Keoka Lake. There is a good bathing beach and a grove furnishes shade. Everyone interested in agriculture and rural life in Oxford County is cordially invited to attend. A picnic lunch will be in order at noon and the 4-H clubs will have refreshments on sale. The forenoon will be devoted to sports for young and old, with the speaking program coming after lunch.

Mr. Aaltonen is manager of the Forest Products Association, Inc., of Groveton, a successful cooperative which handles most of the wood, pulp and lumber sold by farmers in the county. He will discuss the whole theory of cooperation with particular emphasis on marketing products of the farm woodlot. Mr. Aaltonen says cooperation is his religion and this idea without doubt took root while in his native country, Finland, many years ago. He has had a long experience with this system of buying and selling and his method of presentation to an audience is very appealing to farm people. Selective cutting is a practice which the speaker thoroughly believes in as a method of keeping the farm woodlot in a condition such that it can provide an annual income.

If it rains on July 27 the field day will be held on the next fair day.

WINSLOW—SMALL

A quiet wedding took place Saturday evening, July 16 at the Methodist parsonage, Bethel, when Miss Rosellen Small became the bride of Curtis J. Winslow, Rev. M. A. Gordon officiated, using the single ring service. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Leighton of Albany. Their many friends extend congratulations to the couple.

"BOOMERANG" PLEASURES

A fair sized audience greeted the presentation of the comedy-drama, "Boomerang," at Odeon Hall Wednesday evening. Especially pleasing was the work of several of the local players and the professional comedian, Don Lee. The cast was as announced in last week's Citizen except that Bryant Bean was drafted for the butler's part to replace Arthur Cutler. A good attendance is anticipated at the final performance tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Park and Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Sayles were at Northeast Harbor from Friday to Sunday, where they met Dr. G. B. Farnsworth, architects and contractors, and plans for construction of the new boys' dormitory at Gould Academy were discussed.

STATE OF MAINE TOWN OF BETHEL Notice

Hearing will be held at the Selectmen's Office in the Town of Bethel, on Saturday, July 23, A. D. 1938, at 10:30 A. M. by the Municipal Licensing Board for the granting of Victuallers' and Innkeepers' licenses to the following persons:

Mrs. Ella G. Hale
Guy H. Morgan
Mrs. Kenneth Wight

All persons may appear to show cause, if any they may have, why said application(s) for a Victuallers' or Innkeepers' license should not be granted. Dated at Bethel, this 20th day of July, A. D. 1938.

29 ALICE J. BROOKS, Town Clerk

Young Republicans to Meet at Portland

Fred E. Hanscom of Rumford, prominent leader of Young Republicans, has issued an invitation for all young people interested in Republican affairs to attend the State Convention of Young Republicans in Portland July 29. He stated that already a large delegation from Oxford County were planning to attend.

Plans for this Convention, he said, have been completed and the banquet meeting with Governor Aiken of Vermont as the chief speaker promises to be the biggest political affair of the mid-summer.

Mr. Hanscom asked that young people desiring to go, but needing transportation, get in touch with him as soon as possible.

Latter-Day Saints Conference at Portland

Kenneth Stewart attended the summer Conference for the Maine District in the New England Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons), last Friday, July 15, at Portland.

The principal speaker was President Rudger Clawson, President of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles of this church. He has been touring the New England Mission these past two weeks, accompanied by his wife and the Mission president, Elder Carl F. Eyring, and his wife.

President Clawson is the second highest man in the church. He is 82 years old, and has been an Apostle for 40 years.

ALDER RIVER GRANGE

Alder River Grange, No. 145, held a regular meeting Monday evening, July 18, with Worthy Overseer, Rodney Howe, in the chair as the Worthy Master is out of town.

The following sisters were appointed for dinner committee for Pomona Aug. 2: Florence Hastings, Myra Foster, Bernice Noyes.

Question for roll call: Is the chain store a benefit to the farmer? Discussed by all. Guessing contest.

Fifteen members were present at this mid-summer meeting. The next meeting will be Sept. 5.

ROUND MOUNTAIN GRANGE

The members of Round Mountain Grange, Albany, met at their hall Monday evening, July 18, for their regular meeting. After the routine business was taken care of the following program was given:

Singing, "Jingle Bells," Grange Roll Call, Quotations Reading, "Reason for Life," (Guest)

Sister Cella Gorman, Bethel Music, Harmonica and Piano, Leon Kimball, Hazel Wardwell

Question, "How may a farmer's obtain a vacation?" Opened by Viola Kimball, followed by discussion

Piano solo, Ivy Philbrook Reading, "Sand," Hazel Wardwell Vocal duet.

Ivy Philbrook, Elizabeth Gorman Meeting was closed in form. All retired to the dining hall, where the Worthy Brothers treated the Sisters to hot dogs, bananas, sandwiches, cookies, hot coffee, ice cream and cake and candy.

An interesting meeting is planned for Aug. 1st.

Socialist Labor Organizer Here Saturday Night

John P. Quinn, National Organizer of the Socialist Labor party, will be in Bethel Saturday evening to address an out door gathering. The exact time and place have not been announced.

This party opposed the agitation of strikes and other labor strife, and its members feel that they constitute the better element of the working class. Their program is said to be education rather than agitation. They are associated with neither the Socialist nor Communist parties and are open enemies of the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

News from the UMBAGOG INTERSTATE LARGER PARISH

Some important changes have been made in the services of this coming Sunday. There will be no morning Church Service at Newry, but there will be the Church School at 9 o'clock.

Mr. Manter will preach at Upton at 11 a. m.

Mr. Fitzpatrick will preach in Errol at 10:30 a. m. and at Wilson's Mills at 7 p. m.

On Sunday afternoon the young people of the Parish and their friends from Hanover, Rumford Point, and Bethel will gather at Earl Williamson's on Sunday River at 2:30 p. m. to climb Mount Barker. After a picnic supper the young people will go to the Newry Church where a young people's rally will take place at 7 p. m.

Rev. Warren S. Palmer of Norway who has just returned from the National Pilgrim Fellowship Meeting at Rockford will bring the message. The adults of the community are also cordially invited. We are looking forward to a fine time together on Sunday afternoon and an inspiring service in the evening.

Straws from the Parish Hayfield OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

The Sunset Service for All the Parish was caught in a shower last Sunday evening, but that did not keep us from a most profitable hour of worship in which we were led in thought by Prof. Zerby. We had to leave the field, but most of us stopped at the Hersey Home and were greatly helped by Dr. Zerby, who talked with us on "The Art of Living Beautifully." Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock we are expecting to be at The Brown's Camps on Papoose Pond, where we will be led in our worship and thought by Rev. Harry Belcher, D. D. of New York. These All the Parish Services are so good you want to attend as many as possible.

As many as are interested in an informal Discussion Group are invited to meet with Dr. Zerby at the Waterford Parsonage Monday evening. We are going to think of some of the Problems of our day, and consider especially what the teachings of Jesus may offer as a solution.

One of the features of the Waterford Season during the last years has been an Annual Concert given by the Young People. The date for this year is July 26th, next Tuesday evening. The place is the Wilkins Community House. The Concert is given for the benefit of the Manitou Fund.

The Cotton Blossom Singers are going to sing at East Stoneham next Thursday evening, following the Circle Supper. Their concert will begin at 8 o'clock. An offering will be received for the School they represent. We are also hoping arrangements will be made so they will be able to sing for us again in the Parish on Sunday at North Lovell.

On Friday evening we will turn again towards Center Lovell, for the delicious odors of good food, served at the Circle Supper, will attract us. The supper will be served at 6.30 p. m.

Just let us remind you, if you get your paper in time, that there are two good Circle Suppers being prepared for you this week. On Thursday evening at Albany, and on Friday evening at Waterford at the Wilkins Community House.

Life saving and swimming activities at Waterford came to a close Thursday, July 14th.

Boys and girls passing the beginners tests were: Donald Morse, Stephen Filibrown, Veda Millett, Harriet Gallagher, Jean Hubbard, Robert Brown, Donald Russell, Manley Kimball, Nancy Runyon, Billy Carlson, Robert Gyzander, and Josia Ash.

LISTEN TO THIS

By TOM FIZDALE

There's fun on the airways again Sunday nights.

Billy House, famous comedy star of stage and screen, is headliner of the new "The Laugh Liner" Sunday show on CBS. With Jack Fulton, romantic tenor, as soloist and Carl Hohengarten's orchestra providing the musical fare, this is your best bet for Sunday entertainment in keeping with the summer weather.

Billy House

House has been starred in many Broadway hits including "Murder at the Vanities," "Lucky Girl," "All the King's Horses," "White Horse Inn," and two editions of Earl Carroll's "Vanities." His pictures include the new "Merry Go Round of 1938," four Warner Brothers features and eight Paramount short subjects. Jack Fulton's singing and Hohengarten's music have been featured by the same sponsor on "Poetic Melodies" and "Just Entertainment" over CBS for two years.

Radio people coast-to-coast sorrowed by death of wife of Don Quinn, author of "Fibber McGee and Molly" show, as result of auto accident while the two were driving to California to spend their vacation in their new home . . . Ransom Sherman, swell emcee of "Club Matinee," finally awarded a night spot on the network . . . Benny Goodman preparing (with fear and trembling) to pose for those passport pictures required for his European jaunt . . . Lum and Abner, Eddie Cantor and Meredith Willson are other foreign bound stars . . . Network Engineer Richard Stoddard has a thrill in store . . . scheduled to accompany Howard Hughes on round-the-world flight to report to listeners. Donald Novis back at work after siege of illness, his voice swell as ever.

Those Stroud Twins on the Don Ameche show may visit Chicago this summer just to see why Ameche, Dorothy Lamour and Edgar Bergen, all of whom migrated from there, talk about it so much . . . Lowell Thomas, in addition to his news commentating, is president of the New York Advertising Club . . . Henry Hunter, "Attorney at Law" star, has a pet horror—a fear of losing a page from his script . . . Happened once and he had to do an entire scene from memory.

Betty Lou Gerson, vivacious network leading lady, has scored again with her title role in the new "Win Your Lady" series . . . Peggy Wahl, young network actress returning from her first visit to Hollywood, was acquired by a genuine Sheikh of Arabia . . . Sheikh Hafiz Wabha, minister of Saudi Arabia to the Court of St. James, visiting America . . . Was she thrilled? Yes . . . Edith Davis, society matron and wife of the famous surgeon, Dr. Loyd Davis, who plays leading roles in "Betty and Bob," has had a new thrill . . . Her daughter, Nancy, just made her radio debut.

Bing Crosby's program has received the green light for another year . . . Ranch Boys trio, forking horses from Hollywood to the "National Barn Dance" in Chicago now figure making it by July 29 . . . Paul Whiteman now heard Wednesday nights via CBS . . . Those "Hymns of All Churches" will be heard five days a week on NBC the first two weeks in August.

Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy of that "Little Theatre Off Times Square" are two of the most constant riders on Chicago bridge paths . . . Bob Trout, CBS ace reporter, and Kit Crane of net program department, married last week.

This is the season when sponsors and broadcasters formulate new plans for the fall. Current news from this activity is that the sponsors of George McCall, top-notch Hollywood film commentator, have picked up his option for another 13 weeks . . . "Girl Alone" will have a new sponsor come autumn . . . Bayard Vellier, "Valiant Lady" author, has been renewed for two and a half years, setting a record for daytime serial writers . . . Fred Waring goes to a new sponsor this fall . . . Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, ace songsmiths and writers, have been signed to join the Burns and Allen writing staff when the comics turn to a new type of broadcast, built around a musical comedy theme, with the beginning of the new season.

Jack Fulton

Jack Fulton, swell tenor of the new CBS "Life Liner" show starring Billy House, made a flying trip to Hollywood last week to look into picture offers . . . Incidentally, that new series is a smash hit—the only new comedy offering on the air . . . Al Rinker, who with Bing Crosby and Harry Barris were Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys, is now a radio producer in New York . . . Harriet Horton Brewer, featured singer on "Hymns of All Churches," sang before royalty—Crown Princess Louise of Sweden—at a luncheon last Saturday . . . Inna Phillips has been named radio's Number 1 author by volume of writing . . . Writing three serials, she turns out 2,000,000 words a year, or the equivalent of 22 full length novels . . . Dolores "Babs" Gillen, network beautiful, listening to offers to give woman's view of baseball as result of solo "man" in street job she did recently.

Uncle Ezra (Pat Barrett) and Si Skinner (Cliff Soubler) of Station E-Z-R-A and the "National Barn Dance," are both sons of troopers, born and practically reared in the theatre . . . Al Barker, network author, has discovered he writes better standing up . . . Maybe he's been horseback riding . . . Malcolm Meacham, network star, and Bill Batcher, "Hollywood Hotel" producer, staged an unplanned reunion in Chicago this week when they met on the street for the first time since Meacham worked on the show in Hollywood . . . Judy Starr's five-year-old daughter already sings and dances . . . Henry Hunter, "Attorney at Law" star, worrying about his first apricot crop maturing on his California ranch . . . Art Van Harvey, Vic of "Vic and Sade," fishing in Wisconsin . . . Anne Jamison, sensational soprano, will make her opera debut with the San Francisco Opera Company this fall.

Butler Mandeville of "Arnold Grimm's Daughter" doesn't believe in numerology—but hereafter he intends to spell his name "Mandville" because a numerologist recommended it . . . Add unusual names department: network soprano, Hollace Shaw . . . With all the controversy over swing vs. sweet music, it's interesting to note that one program, "Vocal Varieties," has both, with the DeVore Sisters handling the sweet arrangements and the Smoothies swinging it—and no casualties to date.

Benny Goodman and his swingsters will be featured at the famous Ravinia Festival in Chicago on August 2, following his return from Europe . . . Hal Kemp heard these days at the Astor in New York . . . Betty Lou Gerson, "Win Your Lady" star, summery looking in new coat of tan . . . Boak Carter now heard on a new four a week schedule . . . Eddie Cantor, Al Johnson and George Jessel will be masters of ceremonies while Paul Whiteman, Guy Lombardo, Rudy Vallee and Tommy Dorsey play in tribute to Irving Berlin over CBS night of August 4.

Traces of Sun Worship
On the Swedish island of Gothland, in the Baltic sea, can be found a curious vestige of an ancient religion, involving sun worship. On Thursdays, the day of the storm god, the peasants neither spin nor dance; for in the pre-Christian era it was the one day in the week when offerings could not be made to Bal, the sun god.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

I been half-afraid that I might have to quit reading just the front page, and turn clear back to the funnies, now that Congress has gone home.

But I have been unduly alarmed.
And the new tricks and stuff, where they are angling for this 4 billion being dished up down there at head quarters—it is pretty good comedy.

And the ones trying for the money, it is Governors, and City Councils,
etc.—or anybody
who can sniff cash, from far away.

And old Samuel,
he has only one place to get money, and it is from your own tax collector, so anything anybody gets from Wash. it is just your own money.

But when you get it, it is maybe a recreation center or something, which if you exercise in it, your lawn-mower at home, gets rusty.
Or maybe your City Mgr. he gets a bigger and longer car—and next year you pay even more than this year, for his gas.

For real fun and amusement, and comedy, it is hard to beat the front page.

Yours, with the low down,
JO SERRA

Bread Is Bread—by Any Name the World Calls It

Most of us take bread for granted.
Toasted in the morning, made into a sandwich for lunch or picnic use, cut round as a base for hors d'oeuvres, probably in the form of rolls at dinner time. We eat it without giving it a thought.

Yet bread is as varied as the peoples who eat it, observes Martha Harmon in the Philadelphia Record.
Heavy rye in much of central Europe, the long, six to seven foot loaf, while twist is typical of Paris; Mexicans use their tortillas as spoons to lift their other food before consuming the tortillas themselves; the rice cake cooked in ashes may be the food of the very poor in the South, but it is both nutritious and delicious—and the staff of life.

In the Holy Land, bread is kneaded by stamping it against the stone walls, or over three feet long and on holy days every loaf is stamped with a design of a saint. In Hungary the people in some small towns bring their first loaves when the new harvest has been garnered and pile these high in the church for the priest to bless.

Egyptian women bake their bread by piling it on the house-tops for the hot sun to bake, while in lower Egypt many desert wives bake their bread over fires in special containers carried along on camelback so they will have fresh bread for the family when the night stop is made and tents put up for the overnight homes.

In the far northern part of No-way, the women make bread as thin as wafers and several feet in diameter and hang it to season and ripen for a couple of months before serving.

Founder of Chinese Empire
Prince Chin, after whom China is named, lived about 21 centuries ago and was the founder of the Chinese empire. Up to his time, about 250 B. C., China was but a group of independent principalities, about 1,800 in all. Prince Chin conquered em and united them into a single pire, with himself as the first wards.

emperor, Shi Huang Ti. To assure the stability of this empire, he ordered a wall built across its northern boundary. Rebellious princes and their aristocratic courtiers, poets, philosophers, robbers and thieves—all were put to work on this wall. Those who died on the job were buried within it. When completed, many centuries after the emperor's death, it was about 2,500 miles long. It is the wall of China.
The empire thus united by Shi Huang Ti did not last. It fell to pieces shortly after the emperor's death, and was reunited and fell to pieces again many times after-

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SUNNY PICTURES INDOORS

An afternoon nap—and an indoor-sunlight picture of rare charm. Note how reflecting surfaces, the light walls, the bed spread, the white dress soften and brighten the shadows. Exposure 1/10 second at f.8.

Do not feel, fellow snapshotters, that just because the sun stays out of doors you cannot make sunlight pictures inside.
Wherever sunlight streams through a window, there is a setting for a picture, often an extremely good picture, because of the play of light and shadow from the window-framing and curtains.
In a light-walled room, especially one with plain plaster walls or patternless wallpaper, the shadows in such an indoor-sunlight picture have a soft, luminous quality which gives the prints unusual delicacy and appeal. However, unless it is a sun-room that has windows facing in several directions, it is necessary to add the shadow illumination with reflectors. These can be white sheets or pillowcases draped over a chair, white cardboard or blotter-paper, or anything else that will pick up the sunlight and cast it toward the subject's shadow side.

In addition, the light may be pleasingly softened by a close-mesh window curtain through which the sunbeams pass. With such a diffuser exposure should be about double what you would give outside in the sun. The sunlight should come from above, slanting downward upon the subject and amateur floodlight bulbs can be used to soften shadows where reflectors are insufficient.

Word "Thrums" Technical Term, Authority Asserts

Sir James Barrie carved Thrums ("A Window in Thrums") out of Kirriemuir—the old weaving town in Scotland where he was born. But why "Thrums?" The answer is given by James A. Roy, a native Kirriemurian, in "J. M. Barrie: An Appreciation."

"The word is simply the local technical term for threads, a bunch of which hung on every loom in the old weaving days," said Professor Roy. "These thrums were the ends of warp, saved from previous webs, or furnished with the new, to mend the broken threads of the growing fabric."

And just as Thrums was only a portion of Kirriemuir, so were the Auld Lights ("Auld Licht Idylls"), about whom Barrie writes, only a section of the community, Professor Roy explains. "All Auld Lights were not weavers and all weavers were not Auld Lights," he says. "In Barrie's Thrums there were just as many religious denominations as there are in the town today—if not more. Barrie himself was brought up in the Free church, and very possibly was never inside the door of the Auld Licht kirk, which he has immortalized. Religious differences in those days were too acute to permit of wandering from one church to another.

"Barrie left Kirriemuir" when he was ten years old, and being the son of David Barrie, it is unlikely that he ever saw the inside of any church in Kirriemuir except his own —the South Free. It was through his mother that he knew the Auld Lights and their religious views.
Margaret Ogilvy was brought up in the Auld Licht kirk, which she continued to attend until her marriage to David Barrie. She took her memories with her and handed them on to her son."

Mother Goose Lived in the Eighteenth Century

Mother Goose was no myth, as is commonly supposed, but an actual personage, asserts a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She lived in Boston at the beginning of the Eighteenth century. She had an endless stock of old rhymes and jingles in her memory, which she taught her grandchildren, and other children of the neighborhood.

Her daughter, Elizabeth, married a Mr. Fleet, and he believed it might be worth while for her to collect these ditties and put them in permanent form for the use of future generations. He, therefore, brought out a book, of which the earliest edition now known bears the following title: "Songs for the Nursery; or, Mother Goose's Melodies for Children. Printed by T. Fleet, at his printing house, Pudding Lane, Boston, 1719. Price, 2 coppers."

There is little doubt that this was the first edition of the work, since the old records of Boston give the date of the marriage of Thomas Fleet and Elizabeth Goose as 1715.

Small Electrical Appliances Add to Comfort of Farm Life

Corner of model kitchen on 200-acre farm of Herman Boes, R. F. D. No. 2, Tiffin, Ohio, showing electric toaster, food chopper and mixer.

ALTHOUGH true that such electrical equipment as a range, refrigerator, water system and the like are the greatest time, labor and money savers in the farm home, it also is true that numerous small appliances—whose cost is but a fraction of those just mentioned—can contribute much to the comfort, ease, convenience and pleasure of rural life.

Thus, for the kitchen, there is an electric clock, mixer, ventilating fan, screen door, hot plate, cooker, toaster, ice-cream freezer, small radio receiver, food chopper, juice extractor and many other devices.

In the dining room, an electric waffle iron, chafing dish, grill, percolator, toaster and like equipment make meals easy as well as fun to prepare. For the living room an electric clock, corn popper and motion-picture projector are among the smaller pieces of equipment that make life more pleasant.

Electric tie and pants pressers, burglar alarm, door latch, electric blanket, "fever" machine, heating pad and reducer, all are useful and convenient accessories of the bedroom.

A portable heater, electric razor or razor-blade sharpener, hair clipper, curling iron, immersion water heater, hair dryer, massage machine and vibrator add to the utility and comfort of the bathroom.

To many farmers, some of these electrical appliances at first glance may appear as unnecessary luxuries, useless "gadgets" or suitable only for city or suburban dwellers. But if they will talk to their neighbors who have some of them, or gradually—as funds permit—install them themselves, they will learn that they are indispensable necessities. With the coming of electricity, rural life has assumed all the comforts and conveniences of the city—and the advantages now are with the farmer.

Flute Was Used by Early Hindus, Chinese, Japanese

Instruments of the flute type appear to be of very ancient origin. The Hindus, Chinese and Japanese claim to have had them as far back as their civilization can be traced, and such instruments were also known to the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. The first western trace of the transverse flute, notes a writer in the Detroit News, is found in a German manuscript of the Twelfth century, the "Hortus deliciarum" of the Abbess Herrad von Landsberg.

The oldest form of the English flute had seven holes, which could be stopped by the fingers, but had no keys. This instrument was in general use until about the beginning of the Eighteenth century, when it was replaced by the German flute, an instrument over two feet long, which had six finger holes for the normal tones and from six to twelve keys for the semi-tones. Improvements made in the middle of the Nineteenth century by Theobald Boehm, a German, working with Gordon, an Englishman, enabled the player to produce music on any key with all the chromatic intervals. The chief improvement was a system of keys permitting several holes to be closed at the same time with one movement of the finger.

First Use of Gunpowder Is Credited to Chinese

The Chinese are generally credited with being the first to use gunpowder, not only as an explosive, but also as a propellant for missiles, albeit no definite date for the earliest use can be given, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It was earlier than 618 B. C. There is a record of a cannon of about that date, inscribed "I hurl death to the traitor and extermination to the rebel." It seems not to have been a new thing then.

European peoples may have heard of firearms before the Ninth century, but the first account of the use of cannon in the western world is by troops of the Byzantine Emperor Leo in that century.

In the Twelfth century, the Christians and Moors used artillery in their wars in Spain. Improvements were made in gunpowder in 1320, and cannon of small bore appeared soon afterward in the armories of all European nations. This new element of war speedily assumed a most important part in continental questions, and from that day forward the development of firearms has gone on.

Fires Aid the Forests

Fire, greatest scourge of North Carolina's famous pine forests, serves to perpetuate them. In the "natural succession" of forests, oak, hickory, and finally beach and poplar would come to force out the pine, and an earlier stage in reforestation. But periodical fires destroy the invaders, giving quicker growing pines perpetual reign, thus halting evolution in what ecologists call a "sub-climax." Ecologists say that within two thousand years even the most sandy and sterile and dry soil of the Carolina sandhills would be rich oak and beach forests were it not for fires.

If Mr. Goop Lived as He Drives

Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote: "Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy." There is more need for this sage philosophy now, than when he wrote it before the motor car was invented.

The automobile, according to a new booklet entitled "Death Begins at 40" just published by The Travelers Insurance Company, has made many of us into selfish bores. If drivers behaved as considerably when behind the wheel as they do in the drawing room, the death rate soon would be sliced to a fraction of its present appalling proportions.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Christmas of 1913 is only eight days away. Ira Vance and his wife are waiting wistfully for a reply to their letter inviting their son, Emory, his wife, Eleanor, and their children, Tommy, eight, and Bess, five, to the House in the Glen for Christmas. Emory, a salesman executive in a big city, has not been home in five years. The elder Vance, a retired business man, is a devoted father and an excellent husband. The Vances are a family of means. The Vances are a family of means. The Vances are a family of means.

CHAPTER II—Mrs. Vance's first letter has lain unopened on Emory's desk, but Kitty Mack, his secretary, brings it to his attention along with another personal letter. He opens the latter, finding it is from a boyhood friend, Philip Knox, who says he is sending a friend, Dr. Amunde, to visit the Vance's home for Christmas. Emory is annoyed and determines to head The Stranger off. At lunch, he sees a news item about the meeting of his company's directors, indicating there is dissatisfaction with his management. Then he overhears two of the directors, lunching nearby, discussing his one-man dictatorial management disparagingly. One of them speaks of Vance's neglect of Eleanor. Mack at the office, he attempts to wire to Knox, but learns that The Stranger is already on his way. Then he reads his mother's second letter. Absorbed in work he looks up and sees a man standing opposite him who says, "I am The Stranger sent to your gates."

CHAPTER III—Vance is surprised to find he is friendly to The Stranger. An inquiry is made concerning Bess, a draftsman whom Vance had unjustly discharged. He gives an unfavorable report on the man. The special delivery letter from his mother arrives. Eleanor phones, urging Vance to come home to dinner; tells him to bring The Stranger and discussing the letters from home, pleads with him to go to read again. He says he cannot leave the city Christmas. On the way home Emory tells The Stranger that he takes little stock in Christmas. Greeting The Stranger, Eleanor finds that he brings peace to her mind.

CHAPTER IV—Will Darrow, a young artist friend of the family, arrives. Eleanor and Emory learn from the children that their nurse's sister is ill with scarlet fever. Since there is danger of exposure, the doctor suggests that Tommy and Bess be sent away for several weeks. Vance then decides they will go to the Glen, that Eleanor will take the children the next day and return to the city to go back with him Christmas eve. Later there is a painful scene when Eleanor is forced to go to a party with Darrow when Emory refuses to go.

CHAPTER V—At the House in the Glen there is joyful expectation over the arrival of the children. Eleanor and the children are greeted warmly. When Elizabeth Vance looks into her daughter-in-law's eyes she sees an unhappiness that Eleanor seeks in vain to hide.

CHAPTER VI

When Eleanor Vance returned to New York after the day and night spent at the House in the Glen, she brought with her the sense of refreshment of body and mind born of a new point of view.

Eleanor, arriving in the late afternoon, entered her apartment with something of the newly awakened curiosity of a stranger. Instead of the familiarity of the mistress who had left it only twenty-four hours before. Yet the curiosity was very natural for in that brief time she had found an entirely new scale of comparison. At The Glen she had been welcomed to a home where everything in its structure, furnishings and customs had a life history. This home made a background for the house-mother and father that was inseparable from themselves and was tinged through and through with their dual tastes and personality. On the other hand though the apartment owned and occupied by the Vances was luxurious in size, fittings and modern conveniences, its bareness of meaning, the lack of personal things that are as intimate as one's best friends, was the first thought that came to Eleanor, when the maid brought the tea tray to the living room, and placed it upon the carved teakwood stand without word or comment of any sort.

She drew near to the fire, gazed at it fixedly, holding her cup of tea. She was not much given to formulating comparisons, but the difference was forced upon her between the log-fire blazing in the well-smoked chimney of the House in the Glen, sending floods of the stored sun-warmth into the room, and this poor counterfeit with its unvarying flicker framed in a Mexican onyx fire-place. Were not these two fires the symbols of the old and the new homemaking? Personal labor, personal service, and for a reward keen personal satisfaction, as against a mere press-the-button glancing touch of things, no labor, no responsibility and no real satisfaction?

How charmingly Ira Vance had told the story of his hearth fire, as he fed it with the juicy white-pine cones that he held in the long iron tongs lest the flame-tongues should eat them too greedily. Every log held its own meaning for him and possessed a different temperament, so that he spoke of them as of people.

Eleanor had never before realized that the man could take an equal interest with the woman in the details of his home, and by the quiet steady force of his approval fill his wife's most prosaic tasks with warm-blooded interest. It seemed to her that there was nothing that Elizabeth did or liked that escaped her husband's notice, no service too small to merit, if not spoken words, at least the recognition of a loving glance. But then there were few women like Elizabeth.

"If my mother had lived I should have understood these things better," Eleanor whispered, the silence becoming too oppressive. Yet these were Emory's parents toward whom she was leaning, could he love as his father loved Elizabeth? There were so many things that she did not understand, chief among them being herself as she was today, in comparison with what she had been five years ago.

Eleanor did not realize that as the soil in which her love was rooted had gradually grown shallow so had her ideals. The untouched tea grew quite cold, and the maid, who came to take away the tray, gave a reproachful glance at her mistress, as one who had put her to unnecessary trouble.

Presently Eleanor, starting up, looked at the clock, which began to chime five. "I'll try it," she said as she went to her room. Going to a chest of drawers, after much deliberation she selected a gown from among some things that had been long put away and smelled of camphor. It was a sort of tea gown of pale blue, draped skillfully and caught in with ribbons—a graceful garment, its art not discounted by time. Adjusting this, she picked up a photograph case that stood on her bureau. In it were two pictures, a man and a woman—Emory and herself. Carefully noting the few ornaments that she had worn, she selected their counterparts from her drawer.

With heart beating wildly, she returned to the living room and with fingers that would tremble drew a bit of embroidery from her work-bag and waited for Emory's return. Twice the telephone rang and her heart sank, thinking it might be to say that he would dine out, but it was merely the inquiry as to whether Mr. Vance was yet home. Presently the lock turned and the outer door flew back with the nervous push that told that he had arrived.

For a moment Eleanor stood as if in doubt, then going out quickly she put both arms around her husband's neck before he had a chance to greet her with his usual courteous formality, and locking her hand in his she walked with him back to the living room.

"Poor little woman," Vance said in a surprised yet sympathetic tone, "was the country so dull that two half days of it made you desperate? It is lucky that I arranged for you to come back during the interval. How did you find mother and father? Still living in the old humdrum way, I suppose, while mother bravely pretends that she likes it? The children's visit will be a perfect Godsend to them."

Eleanor's first tremor of disappointment at the mistake in the motive of her greeting was put aside by her eagerness to explain and tell of her pleasure, her absolute joy in her visit. So absorbed was she by her story of the House in the Glen and its people, that they were half way through dinner before she came to a stop and realized that not only had she done all the talking, but that The Stranger was not there and she had forgotten to ask for him.

"Dr. Amunde? He is certainly a most singular man," Emory replied; "As has discovered in Miss Mack, my secretary, a new source of interest, an original interpretation of the real Christmas spirit, as he calls it, developed by modern conditions, and so he has gone to dine at her sister's home amid the confusion of six untamed brats. By the way, he will go to Westover with us for Christmas, but he says that he must continue his journey the day after."

"I think your people would simply love him. I'm very sorry that he must leave so soon, for, do you know, dear, I believe if he could stay with us a while everything might be different. It seems as if he were someone who had always known me, and who understood."

"Different—understood? Eleanor, for some time past you have been harping on one chord, growing unreasonable, discontented, or else trying to pose as a martyr, neither mood being necessary," and Vance applied himself to eating with a deliberation that made for a silence lasting throughout the meal.

"Do I remind you of anything?" Eleanor asked, hesitatingly, after the coffee had been served, the man gone and Emory was holding a cigar, rolling it between his fingers as if uncertain whether to light it then and there or to go out.

"Remind me of anyone? Why, how?" Then he studied her quite carefully for a full minute with a puzzled expression and knitted brows.

"I can see that you are dressed differently from usual and that it has not only changed your expression, but your figure also, and very much for the worse. In fact, you look rather awkward and muddled up. Is it a riddle? Have you amused yourself by making up for a book-tittle in a guessing contest, or are you going to a masquerade?"

At that moment nothing could have forced her to confess that it was the once admired picture of herself that she had striven to copy, and the hurt thus turned inward dipped her usually guarded tongue in bitterness.

"Ah! you would not understand if I told you!" There was a new quality in her tone not explained by her words that startled Vance. Rapidly she turned the subject and told of his father's perception, of his interest in the house and his daily, hourly, worship of and dependence on his wife, making the simple narrative almost dramatic and hurling it at her husband like a challenge.

Even then Vance did not retort angrily, in fact, he was so preoccupied that only a small part of what she said reached his consciousness. Waiting until she had quite finished he sat folding and unfolding the napkin on his knee.

"Yes, I can believe all that," he said at last. "Father has had nothing more important than his home life to fill his mind—while the best energies and perceptions of the most successful men are given to their work. With father it is different; you may not realize it, my dear, but, pleasant as he is at home, father has always been a failure."

"Then, Emory, with all my heart and soul I wish that you might fall as he has—" and leaving the table quickly, yet without show of vulgar petulance, Eleanor went to the empty nursery and throwing herself on Tommy's bed sobbed herself into a heart-broken fitful sleep, as the child himself might have done.

"Strange how women at times seem to take pleasure in lashing their emotions," was Emory's mental comment. "I fear the outcome of this unavoidable visit will make an unwholesome break in the routine for us all."

"There are several parcels that cannot be packed in the trunks. Shall I send them to Westover by express?" Eleanor asked Vance, early in the week.

"Not if you must have them by Christmas; the terminals take precedence in a rush, and Westover is on a branch line. I will take the automobile and the things can go with us. If we leave promptly at three o'clock we can reach The Glen in time for supper without going into Westover at all."

"Couldn't you possibly get off at noon on the twenty-fourth, Emory? The children are so anxious to have you help to dress the tree. Your mother has told them how you used to do it with her, and I really think she still has some of the same decorations put away. They would be broken-hearted if we should be late." "And so should I," she would have added if the frown that caught Vance's face in its tangled meshes had not checked her.

"Leave at noon? Certainly not! Give an inch, take an ell. It is impossible to satisfy my family; it seems to me that leaving the city at all is a sufficient concession."

"Not a concession on your part, Emory, do not forget that, but an emergency which overtook us, and your mother's welcome was a loophole through which you crawled—how much to my shame I never dreamed until I felt her arms about me. One thing more, do you intend to drive that car yourself? You may have forgotten that some weeks ago Brown asked for two days' absence at Christmas to be with his family."

Eleanor snappy, Eleanor sitting

"Then, Emory, With All My Heart and Soul I Wish That You Might Fall as He Has."

In judgment upon him—Emory was astounded. "More demoralization! Yes, I had quite forgotten Brown," he said. "I will get a special man from the garage, for it promises to be too cold for me to undertake so long a trip—though, after all, it might be done without a chauffeur, for Darrow is taking up some painting truck for a week's stay at his home, and he was fussing so about its transportation that I've asked him to join us."

"Very well, I will be ready—but, oh! Emory, please, please, do not let anything prevent your coming, or make you late; I don't think I could bear it."

"How absurd, Eleanor. Do you think me purposely irresponsible? There is no use in being hysterical in advance, for if I expected to be detained I should most certainly have asked you to take the train."

With so much to be done, it would seem that the days following would have passed quickly for Eleanor, but instead they dragged along shod in lead. The trunks were to be ready early on the morning of the twenty-third, and, as the maid came in to finish the packing, Eleanor bade her leave one particular trunk—that she wished to pack personally.

Spreading all the things upon the floor, Eleanor knelt beside them, fingering the trunk lid with an almost caressing touch as she opened it. It was a wide, shallow affair with a single tray, and on the ends were stamped the initials of her girlhood. In a flash her mind flew back ten years to the day when, kneeling in the same way, she had packed this same trunk for her wedding journey, her uncle-father half playful, half tearful, standing beside her. Why did her hands tremble so? It almost seemed as if this time she was preparing for an equally important journey, but from which there was to be no happy return. In her absorption she looked up through big tears that hung to her lashes, half expecting to see her father there once more, but it was The Stranger who had paused on the threshold of the open door, when she had thought that he was writing letters in Vance's den.

"Tired, my child, and lonely also because the children are away?" he asked, his voice clinging tenderly to the words as stooping to lift her he led her to a chair. Then he closed the trunk and looking at her handed her the key.

Strangely thrilled, yet soothed, by his touch, Eleanor sat, half crouching and dumb, her hands clasped, until as he continued standing before her as if expecting her to speak she raised her eyes to meet his.

"After first youth goes, is there any such thing as real love, the whole love as it is in the beginning, between husband and wife, is there any one in the whole world who is perfectly happy?" Eleanor asked the questions in a measured tone, as lacking in emotion as if she was inquiring the time of day.

For a moment the stranger did not answer, but shifted the letters between his hands as if they were his only thought.

"Your second question may be answered by a legend. I met with it in the southwest mountains of Natoma's country, where it doubtless was related long ago by the Mission priests until in many forms it has passed from tribe to tribe until it has become as the truth. Back in the days when the Man of Sorrows, Manitou's own son, walked the earth to banish death and sorrow, a woman came to him carrying her dead child and, knowing that he could work miracles, begged him to give it life. Crying out and saying: 'Master, no one in the whole world is so desolate and sad as I.' Quietly her, he replied: 'Before I may do that which you ask, go forth and before evening bring me pounded maize from a tribe where there has been no death.'

"The woman set out and all the day went from tent to tent, seeking the maize, but night fell and she had not found it. Then returning she bowed her head and said: 'Master, I understand.'

"As for love, Eleanor, heart-rooted married love, it does not die with youth, but grows stronger with the years, even as the tree is stronger than the sapling. Yet oftentimes when love ceases his first impetuous boyish clamor, through carelessness he is shut out, then the Gate of Understanding is the only way for his return."

Eleanor's head drooped lower and lower, until she hid her face with her arm.

"It seems that I was born to loneliness," she whispered half to herself, half to The Stranger. "My mother was unhappy also, for my father grew estranged and went away, no one knew where, and died far off, before he even knew that I was born, and, though I've often thought and read about him, I do not even know his face, for there is no picture."

"How do I know all this? It is written in this little red book that my mother left to talk to me in her place, when she knew that she must go. See this is mother's." And Eleanor drew from her waist an oval locket that held a miniature portrait done on ivory.

As she spoke in broken sentences, hesitating as if uncertain in choosing her words, The Stranger suddenly strode toward her, stretching out both arms, then as quickly dropped them at his sides, while his words rushed from his lips in a new tone fraught with such a note of human passion, that she was startled and shaken as by an electric storm.

"You are not single in your agony, Eleanor." Then the voice, though clear, dropped as if for only her inner self to hear, "Nor do you yet know the keenest suffering. To be misunderstood is cruel, but to misunderstand love and never know the truth until the gate is forever closed, that is the very depth!"

Arrives at Party Sparkling with Information

Cornelia Otis Skinner says: "As a child, I never learned the modern streamline method of absorbing an entire paragraph at a glance. It takes me a week to read a novel, ten days for the average biography. This naturally narrows down my selection of reading matter."

"But now comes the Reader's Digest to keep me abreast of the times. The cutting and skipping has been done in advance by the editors. The pieces are of such compactness that even I can finish three or four on my way to a party and arrive sparkling with information."

You will enjoy and benefit by The Reader's Digest, too. Every issue is brim-full of worthwhile articles that you can't afford to miss. If you do not already know The Reader's Digest, you may have a sample copy free, through a special arrangement made with this paper. Address your request to Dept. THE SMALL SHOP

Located At 171 Lisbon St., Lewiston, Feature A Very Fine Selection Of Mexican Pottery, White Pottery, Prism Lamps, Costume Jewelry And Many Other Attractive Objects—Have A Very Active Circulating Library And Here You Can Secure The Latest Popular Works In Fiction And Non-Fiction For Only A Few Cents A Day.

The Small Shop is convenient for the people all over this part of the state and saves people much time and trouble in making selections.

The Small Shop have an unusually large, fine and varied stock which includes Mexican pottery, white pottery, Egyptian copper, prism lamps, costume jewelry, decorative objects and gifts for every occasion.

Since the days of old it has been the custom to carry gifts to guests and family. We read of the travelers of old leaving a country laden with gifts of every kind. Today this old custom is as enjoyable as ever; it is the modern gift shop which is rendering its continuation possible. Travelers, vacationists and tourists find The Small Shop the place to get gifts and souvenirs, to carry away a pleasant reminder of an enjoyable visit.

Their rental library gives everyone the opportunity to read the latest literature of the day at a few cents per day. This is a great educational influence and if you do not know what you want to read they are able to offer suggestions that will make your reading very entertaining and educational.

In this review we are glad to call the attention of the people to The Small Shop and to refer its stock and service to our readers.

LEWISTON & AUBURN CREDIT ASSOCIATION

With Offices At 163 Main St., Lewiston, Offer A Very Reliable Service To Merchants, Manufacturers And Other Business Men In Furnishing Them Credit Information, Financial Standings And Credit Ratings—By Making Use Of Their Service You Can Protect Yourself Against Costly Losses.

The services of The Lewiston & Auburn Credit Association are a great aid to making business more prosperous throughout this section as their clients avoid taking many costly losses which invariably follow giving easy credit to the wrong person.

By consulting with The Lewiston & Auburn Credit Association, merchants and business men will save themselves much trouble, time and money as their credit ratings and lists are reliable and their service prompt. Their confidential advice and recommendations will reduce your credit losses to a minimum.

The credit bureau protects the buyers as well as the seller. The honest thrifty buyer needs credit but can ill-afford to assume an obligation, which at the outset is impossible of fulfillment. The buyer's signature has a definite value as ascertained by The Lewiston & Auburn Credit Association, based on such factors as background, home, property holdings, salary or income, moral hazard and time-payment history.

In our present age granting of credit and charge accounts would be practically impossible without the services of such organizations as The Lewiston & Auburn Credit Association and without credit the volume of business done would be sharply curtailed. The day has long since passed when a merchant could judge for himself and extend credit to anyone who impressed him as having an "honest" face.

In making this review we are glad to refer The Lewiston & Auburn Credit Association to our readers and heartily recommend their services.

MAINE AUTOMOBILE ASS'N.

Located At 212 Middle St., Portland, Offers A Very Accommodating Auto Club Service Such As Planning Trips, Road And Touring Information—Is A Member Of A.A.A., The Only National Motoring Organization With Offices From Coast To Coast—Is A Civic And Non-Profit Association—Tel. 2-8394.

With the ever-increasing popularity of the motor car, there has come the realization that an organization is necessary to further the interests of motorists both as a body and individually. The modern automobile club is the answer to this need, and an outstanding local example is The Maine Automobile Association.

It answers the needs of motorists individually by a comprehensive service to take care of all petty annoyances which beset automobilists. Their competent staff has gathered at their headquarters a complete resume of latest available information on the condition of roads in all parts of the country and various other details of interest to motorists. They gladly help members plan tours and will completely change an automobile tour from the old haphazard exasperating way of just drifting along to a fully planned trip. There are a great many advantages in being a member of The Maine Automobile Association such as timely aid in all situations, towing and wreck service, tire changing, starting your car, bringing gas, bail if arrested or held after accident, personal accident insurance, the world's best maps and travel guides, road conditions and distances, rates and information on hotels and tourist camps, where to go and what to see, and what to do in case of accident. You can learn fully the advantages of being a member by stopping in at the office at Portland.

A.A.A. clubs as a whole and The Maine Automobile Association in particular have done much for the collective interests of motorists. They have agitated for better roads improvements at dangerous curves or crossings, put up warning signs, etc., and have generally exerted influence in making public opinions favorable to movements for the enhancement of automobilism and in inducing governing bodies to such movements. It is part of your civic duty as an automobile owner to belong to The Maine Automobile Association.

The public influence and the many individual advantages of the auto club should make every car owner want to belong to one; we can do no better than to recommend this non-profit civic and public spirited, efficiently run organization which does everything for its members, The Maine Automobile Association.

STANDARD MOTOR EXPRESS, INC.

With Main Office On Greenleaf Ave., Norway, And Other Offices At Lewiston, Berlin, N. H., And Boston, Mass., Offer Motor Freight Service With Every Day Service Between Norway, Berlin, Boston, Bridgton, Lewiston, South Paris, Auburn And Oxford—Feature Prompt Deliveries And Careful Handling—All Goods Covered By Insurance—Tel. Norway 440.

Sanborn's Motor Express, Inc., represents the very highest development in the trucking service of the day and its continuous expansion is the result of great foresight and ability to anticipate the needs of the territory served and always be ready to meet them.

They have a fleet of trucks that are able to cover the routes at frequent intervals. These are kept in the best of condition at their headquarters and are always ready to go. They are driven by men who know the routes and are very accommodating either in the receiving or delivering of goods entrusted to their care. All you have to do is to call them over the phone and arrange for the trucking and they will attend to all details. While they specialize in the delivery of goods in the towns they touch yet they offer connecting line service to all points in New England and see that you get the proper receipts from the carrier you turn over the shipping to. Great care is taken with the handling of all goods to see that they are not damaged in transit and to see that they are delivered to the proper address. The drivers are able to locate any address along the lines and there is never any trouble with shipments.

The management saw the disadvantages and inconveniences that people were put to in the dispatching or receipt of goods and decided to offer a service that is in accord with present day methods of transportation and service. They have expanded the service to keep pace with the growing demands and you will find they will always be able to handle all goods entrusted to them.

You will always receive the most courteous and rapid service. Just call them and they will give you any information you desire as to time for calling or delivery.

In making this review we are pleased to call the attention of the people to the advantages of their service and would suggest that one who has not tried their service should give them a call the next time they are doing any shipping.

Elements Needed for Plant Growth

The elements essential for plant growth are hydrogen, oxygen, carbon, nitrogen, potassium, calcium, magnesium, phosphorus, iron, chlorine and sulphur. Certain plants make use of other elements, but they are not considered essential. With the exception of potassium, phosphorus and nitrogen, these elements are prepared in most soils in sufficient quantities to meet the plant's need. Green plants use carbon dioxide from the air in making starch. The other foods come normally from the soil.

The Hussars

The hussars were the light cavalry troops originally raised by the thias Corvinus in 1458 to fight against the Turks. Of the several possible origins suggested for word, the most generally accepted is that it is derived from the Magyar word, husz, meaning twenty, troops having been raised by selling every twentieth man in the community.

BOIVIN WELDING SHOP

Located On Prospect Ave., Rumford, Feature Electric Arc And Acetylene Welding And Will Weld Anything—Have Portable And Stationary Welding Outfits—Make A Specialty Of Welding Cracked Motor Blocks—Also Feature Machine Shop Work—Tel. 920-W.

In the maintenance of continuous production in modern industry there is no concern that plays a more important part than The Boivin Welding Shop.

They offer the very latest scientific tests and reports on all welding matters. They have developed much new in the art and science of welding and are well known authorities. From the day that the earth was a seething caldron and the metals were made in the various refinements it has not been until of recent years that we were able to approach the great heat and bring them together.

The future looks to the metallurgist to some day produce heat that will cause the transmutation of metals and surpass the deeds of the mythological Vulcan.

They have a very modern shop with electric and oxy-acetylene welding and a very modern repair plant and have installed all kinds of machinery, have ample room for the getting of materials in and out and have in their employ men who are specialists in the various lines of activity, thus assuring the public of the most efficient service.

Mr. Boivin and his assistants will weld practically any description of metal and are noted for welding jobs that stick. All you have to do is to take any broken parts in there and they will weld them while you wait if you desire.

In this review of our progress we are glad to call the attention of the public to the very efficient service and to the relationship they have to maintenance of industry in the country and refer The Boivin Welding Shop to our readers when in need of complete and accurate service.

It is a long stride in optometry from the old fashioned spectacle peddler to the modern optometrist as from the medicine man to the modern physician and those who desire work of the very latest order will find a visit to the office of this modern scientist filled with pleasure and excellent results.

He has attained a reputation as an eyesight specialist in the correction of troubles which affect children's eyes the success in this important work deserves the highest commendation. Many grateful mothers have found that after a consultation with him their children soon improved in their studies and their grades became higher just as soon as the trouble had been corrected.

He is an optometrist who offers the latest of scientific service. He has in his office the latest of equipment for measuring the exact status of each eye and also the relationship between the two eyes as binocular vision is more important than monocular vision and when all this is recorded on the instruments they know how to translate it into the proper glasses if they are needed, which will give perfect satisfaction. There is no guess work nor charms used to restore the sight but accurate and precise methods of science.

Dr. M. J. Brooks is well known in professional circles and has a large acquaintance over the surrounding territory.

In making this review we are glad to compliment Dr. M. J. Brooks as a man who is thoroughly abreast of the times and the work is accomplishing much in the vision of the period.

1937 JEAN VALJEAN, CONSCIENCE CLEAR, CONTENT IN PRISON

Ex-Bank Robber Returns to Oklahoma After Decade of Dodging Law.

McAlester, Okla.—Jack Brodie, his Irish face open and honest in spite of a decade as a fugitive from prison, sat in Oklahoma State penitentiary here and declared that in spite of his prison garb he felt he was a better man than at any moment since he fled a prison camp near Ardmore, Okla., in 1926.

Brodie, who has lived a stainless life since he escaped and who owns his own home in his adopted city of Colfax, Wash., returned of his own will to the penitentiary which he entered in 1922 for robbery of a rural Oklahoma bank.

"It's a great load off my mind in spite of these clothes," he remarked, pointing to his prison garb with one hand while holding a cigarette in the other. "And I'll never consider any opportunity to re-enter crime."

The forty-two-year-old former Arkansan, somewhat ill at ease in prison environment again, recalled the ever-present fear which haunted him for so long.

Used No Disguise.

"I was not particularly afraid at any time, but I was constantly expecting to meet some old acquaintance who would recognize me," he remarked. "In all these years I never met any one whom I personally knew, although once a man stopped me on the street and asked me if I wasn't Jack Brodie. I talked him out of it." Brodie smiled in recollection.

Kinks in Cats' Tails
Approximately one-quarter of all the domestic cats in the world have a natural kink, knot or "break" in their tails.—Collier's Weekly.

Patry—Tel. 23.

In the campaign for better and more beautiful homes and buildings The Reliable Roofing Co. have exerted quite an influence and their work is the admiration of the discriminating.

They have looked over the roofing field and has selected roofing material of such a quality that it enables them to offer a guaranteed roof for every building. They feature the very best types of roofing and will go over the roofing problem with you. They will thoroughly look over any property you may have in mind and aid you in the selection of a design and color that will make the house attractive both as an individual and also as a member of the community. These roofs enhance the value of property and if you ever want to sell you will find that an attractive roof will make the house one to be desired. They also feature the most durable and artistic roofing and many places that they have roofed over the state resent an excellent appearance.

They conduct a place that is prepared to execute all classes of work including tin work, and all other fine and intricate features of modern sheet metal establishments such as skylight, ventilators, ceilings, furnace repairing, down spouting, guttering, copper, brass, iron, zinc and tin work and rebuilding, ridge roll cresting and all kinds of ornamental work. They also feature steel ceilings and blower and air conditioning systems.

In this review of today we are glad to compliment The Reliable Roofing Co. upon the position occupied in the trade and would suggest that anyone having any roofing problems get in touch with them and have them explain and map out the roof for any building you may have.

LEWISTON BUICK CO.

Located At 285-287 Main St., Lewiston, And With Branches At Portland, Augusta, Waterville And Bath—Have A Large Department For Used Cars And Here You Can Always Find Dependable Buys In Used Cars, And Used Commercial Cars Which Have Been Put In The Best Of Condition—They Have Been Giving Honest Used Car Values For Over 20 Years.

The Lewiston Buick Co. have a used car department where they have on display bargains in used cars and thoroughly reconditioned cars. Here the wise buyer can find thousands of miles of troublefree and satisfactory motoring at a fraction of the original cost.

Their position is one of advantage in the used car market. The prices of the new cars make it necessary to have wonderful bargains in this department. These are sold on such terms as are very attractive. They have a great variety in this department and you can find most anything you want.

Every used car they sell has their guarantee and their reputation behind it. If the car needs it, it has been thoroughly reconditioned and put in good running shape, and it is sold only if it is in good all-around condition. Their word has a meaning, and it is the final O.K. in the used car business. Many fly-by-night concerns make all kinds of extravagant promises on used cars and then refuse to recognize the unhappy buyer when he comes in to tell his troubles. On the other hand they always keep faith with the public and they have followed this principle of square dealing ever since they have been in business.

In making this review of today we cannot fail to compliment The Lewiston Buick Co. upon the part they are playing in the transportation life of the times and to say that the coming season holds a wonderful future for them.

Marriage by Elopement Is Common in Bali Land

In Bali, prearranged marriage is in general the old-fashioned respectable way for the feudal aristocracy to marry; but marriage by elopement is much more common, writes Miguel Covarrubias, in Asia Magazine.

The average boy in love with a girl makes his marriage arrangements directly with her and, aside from his father, perhaps, and a few friends from whom he needs help, he keeps his intentions secret until the day, previously agreed upon between the boy and girl, when he will steal her.

She couples simply run away together to the house of a friend, as a rule in another village, where they spend their honeymoon in hiding. But the Balinese love spectacular kidnappings. The girl arranges for her clothes to be taken secretly to the future hideout, and on the appointed day she is captured somewhere on the road in the fields or on the river by the kidnapping party led by her suitor.

She is expected to kick and bite her abductors. Although there may be witnesses, they would not dream of interfering, unless they are relatives of the girl, in which case they are supposed to put up a great fight.

At her home, as soon as her disappearance is discovered her enraged father is supposed to run to the alarm drum-tower and beat the kulkul, asking who took his daughter, but, of course, no one knows. Even a searching party may be organized for the fun of it, but after a while they return breathless and empty handed.

The great marriage ceremony is supposed to take place within 42 days after the kidnapping, but in some cases it has been performed considerably later if there is not enough money immediately available for the festivities.

Culling trees as the poultryman culls hens and the dairyman culls cows, is a need of the fruit grower.

Curious Squirrel Embalmed

Lynchburg, Va.—A squirrel made a take when it undertook a bee tree in Bedford. The honey-embalmed squirrel, which was sent to Prof. Ruskin S. Lunenburg college, received the tale.

J. B. and Horace A. Symington found the remains of a squirrel which was as though it had died in agony, back in 1928, when they opened up a bee tree to wild honey. The bees moved everything they could, but the good bones and connective were apparently too tough for bee workers to handle and were embalmed in honey.

LOVE CHARMS TO KEEP MATE

Negroes in British Guiana Odd Tradition

New York.—Belief in their and women born on the island of the week should never open one of the strange traditions of Paramaribo, a town in Guiana, according to a study issued by the University Press.

"Having been born on a weekday—Thursday, let us say, they both have a Thursday conflict, since both are, in the eyes of the natives, of the same source," says the report, by Melville J. and Frances Koritz, New York anthropologists.

"The two may have tried, against this difficulty, yet refuse to live together." Sometimes, it is explained, husband or wife may feel the other's love, and in "tying the soul" may be to as a charm to hold the affection.

"The actual technique is several forms," the report says. "One way is for the man to use a black pot made of Bush-negro women of the type of pottery much used in the bush and in the its inherent magic proper a knife she scrapes the bark until she has about a teasy the scrapings, and this into the man's food."

"That night, when the asleep, she gets up softly not to awaken him, pour rainwater into the black places a candle in it, places this pot at the man as he sleeps. Taking up a white thread, she tries to the man sufficiently to elicit from him, having care, not to bring him to fullness."

"After the third response him, she quickly makes the string and lights it. If she means to free his she keeps the string, for knot is untied, his soul is otherwise she throws it that it is in no danger found by the man should become aware that she his soul."

Offer Reward for Return of Old Prisoner

London.—A reward of posted for the return of a old skeleton stolen from cell.

The skeleton, chained to an oak chair, was stolen from the house of a man, Rye house, at Hoddeston,shire, scene of the famous plot against Charles II.

The castle now is a tourist attraction. Its owner, T. Green believed the "kidnaping" of somebody's "grizzly kind of."

The Rye house plot was by one of Cromwell's officers to murder Charles the duke of York, later Charles II. The plan was to when they returned from market races, but it was for they returned a day ahead of time.

The plotters were the missing skeleton must be that of one of them.

Located On Main St., South Paris, Is Noted For Freshness And Rare Beauty Of Flowers Which Represent The Very Best That Nature Produces—Flowers And Potted Plants For All Occasions—Carries Complete Lines And Enjoys A Large Patronage From The Surrounding Territory.

In the complexity of modern society there is no one business that has come into more prominence in the past few years than the floral house. In this community there is no florist who enjoys a wider reputation for offering the public a most complete service than E. P. Crockett.

For centuries flowers have been symbolical of the more delicate phases of human nature and the recent development of the flower as a token of esteem and remembrance has placed it in the front rank for all social, mourning and joyful occasions. Its varied uses have made the modern florist a deep student of social etiquette and there is no one more versed in this phase of the business than E. P. Crockett. Place your order with him either in person, by phone or letter and he will see that your card arrives at the right time.

He has an excellent selection of cut flowers that includes practically all varieties and no matter what your desire may be just call him and he will see that your wishes are carried out. These are kept in the very best of condition as he has provided all facilities necessary to keep all the stock in prime bloom.

The interior of the greenhouses is equipped in an up-to-date manner and a modern system of perfect heating regulates the temperature within while the atmosphere is laden with an exquisite fragrance which delights the senses and makes this one of the delightful places to visit in the vicinity for here will be found an assortment of flowers of every variety which bloom the year around.

In this review we wish to compliment E. P. Crockett and suggest that when in need of anything in the flower line you depend upon his service.

ANDROSCOGGIN MOTOR SALES

Located At 493 Lisbon St., Lewiston, Feature The Bee System Of Wheel And Axle Alignment And Straightening—Their Service Will Free Your Car Of Tire Wear, Wheel Shimmy And Hard Steering—All Motorists Should Have Their Wheels And Axles Inspected At Frequent Intervals For Proper Alignment—Tel. 3068.

The Androscoggin Motor Sales Co. offer motorists a very convenient service in wheel alignment and axle straightening and have installed the Bee System to do this work.

They offer an excellent service in wheel alignment and axle straightening and if the car steers hard, shimmies or wanders and does not coast freely the wheels are probably out of alignment. Alignment adjustments are quickly made and inexpensive and no service will give greater returns on tires, gas, oil and driving comfort. They are equipped with Bee equipment which detects and registers on a dial the alignment of your wheels in number of feet slip per minute. All motorists are invited to check the alignment of their wheels on the indicator free of charge and if they need adjustment they are prepared to offer rapid service.

The automatic alignment of wheels saves rubber, wandering, weaving, shimmying, hard steering and accidents. It is best to have them aligned occasionally to see that everything is O. K. in this age of fleet cars. Their Bee equipment will give you the most accurate service.

He also features the Bee system of axle straightening and aligning by which system, they can straighten axles cold without removing them from the car.

In making this review we are glad to compliment The Androscoggin Motor Sales Co. and heartily recommend their services to all of our readers.

F. LE ROY BONNIE

With Office On Main St., Norway, Is An Optometrist Of Experience And Broad Professional Ability—Features Accurate Examination Of The Eyes—Has Aided The Vision Of Many People Throughout This Section—You Can Trust Him To Properly Take Care Of Your Eyes—Tel. 358-2.

In the days of continual stress and nerve strain the profession of the optometrist is one of the ones most vital to our well being, and among the optometrists of this section none enjoy a higher reputation than F. LeRoy Bonnie.

Under the conditions of modern life the eyes are subjected to a vast amount of work for which nature never intended them, and as a consequence there are today many troubles arising from eyestrain which were unheard of a generation ago. Many people imagine that the eyes are alright as long as they can see well, but this is quite a mistake. Good vision is sometimes secured at the expense of so much nerve energy that the whole system suffers as a consequence. Some eye troubles are relieved by glasses and others do not need glasses. Many troubles arise from a lack of co-ordination between the two eyes and these can often be put right without glasses. Even "cross-eyes", so long considered hopeless, can now be straightened without operation, by modern Optometric methods. There are also many people who had perfect eyes to begin with, who now find that their eyes tire and ache after a little reading or sewing. Then again headache, dizziness, nerve troubles, stomach trouble, etc., often come from eyestrain. All these cases should have a thorough eye examination, and here is where Optometry comes in.

The Optometrist is the only man specially trained for his work. He is therefore the real sight specialist. With his modern scientific instruments he is able to make a thorough examination of the eyes, without the use of "drops". The offices of F. LeRoy Bonnie are fully equipped with these scientific instruments, and F. LeRoy Bonnie is thoroughly skilled in modern Optometric methods.

He is able to render a complete service, so that if glasses are needed it is not necessary to go to another place to have them fitted. He prefers to attend to the fitting himself, and thus make sure that his patient gets the proper results from his prescription.

In this review we are glad to compliment F. LeRoy Bonnie and recommend his services to our readers.

BERLIN

Located At 26 Forest Ave., Portland, Features Chris-Craft Cruisers, Utilities And Runabouts, Johnson Outboard Motors, Old Town Boats And Canoes, All Kinds Of Used Boats And Outboard Motors—Phone Dial 3-3920.

Albert G. Frost of Portland is doing boat enthusiasts a great service and at the same time showing taste and discrimination by electing to handle motors, refrigerators, boats, canoes, cruisers, utilities, runabouts, etc.

The new Johnson Sea-Horse have many new improvements, notably the new electric starting, although rope-starting models are still available. They hold more records for speed and performance than all other makes combined, and this year they bring a new conception of comfort, speed and economy to motor boating. They are compact, fool proof and superior. They are available in Matched Units with Johnson Sealite boats. These boats have 35% greater strength and 50% less weight than comparable boats. With patented construction to end leakage and bailing, they are guaranteed to outlast usual construction.

Old Town Boats and canoes, used boats and outboard motors are also here in great variety. In fact, this is a regular boat headquarters and no matter what you may want you will be able to find it among the great selection carried here.

Albert G. Frost is also the dealer for the Chris-Craft motor boats for they know that this is the day of the motor boat. The delights of boating and yachting, before only possible to a favored few, have now come within reach of the entire people. All you need is a Chris-Craft and you are off for a cool, pleasurable and health-giving excursion on the water. Mr. Frost is performing a very real service in distributing the famous Chris-Craft in this section.

In closing this brief review we are pleased to refer Albert G. Frost to our readers.

Oil Suffocates Larvae
A fact that oil floats on water is a use of when it is poured on water containing mosquito larvae; suffocates the larvae from reaching surface to breathe, so they die of asphyxiation.

Meaning of Term "Bulldoze"
A term to "bulldoze" originally at to thrash a negro with a bull.

Among and Amongst
Among and amongst are two words that are practically interchangeable. We use the more euphonious or the easier to say. Some writers always use amongst where there is movement. "He travelled amongst native tribes," but "He lay among the daisies." The foregoing applies also to amid and amidst.

CLOUGH & PILLSBURY

Located At 109 Congress St., Rumford, Feature Philgas Service Which Will Give You Natural Gas Even Though You Are Miles Away From A Gas Main—Will Give Prompt Delivery To Farm And Country Homes Throughout This Section—Also Carry A Large Stock Of Sporting Goods, Hardware And DuPont Products—Tel. 390.

Through the services of Clough & Pillsbury, suburban and farm life in this section of Maine has been made much more attractive as now by reason of their services there is no home which cannot enjoy a modern system of cooking and heating with bottled gas fuel.

They offer the Philgas system which gives you a gas fuel that has been passed by the National Board of Underwriters, and can be secured as complete systems with ranges, heaters and other gas appliances. Philgas can be used for practically every purpose for which any gas is employed and in fact is just like having a gas well in your back yard save for the fact that the installation of Philgas always is very simple and does not involve tearing up the lawn for mains nor the floors and walls for plumbing as they can be installed quickly and easily without fuss or dirt.

With this system there need be no more fooling with wicks nor filling of tanks nor cleaning of burners nor re-moving of ashes for they put an end to these drudgeries and allows you time formerly spent in these pursuits for leisure. With Philgas you merely turn on the gas and light it and you immediately have a flame intensely hot with perfect combustion and absolutely free from soot or smoke.

This system comes in two cylinders of gas and one cylinder is used at a time. When the cylinder in use becomes empty, you turn on your other cylinder and notify them and they will replace the empty cylinder with a full one, thus giving an uninterrupted supply of gas at all times. Stoves, heaters and other gas appliances adapted for this system may be secured in many attractive models.

Clough & Pillsbury have a very attractive store and also carry a large stock of sporting goods, hardware and DuPont products and whatever you may want in these lines you can secure here at the best prices.

It affords us a distinct pleasure in making this review to recommend Clough & Pillsbury and refer their service to all of our readers.

They also have a large stock of new furniture and in fact have everything needed for any summer home or camp and when you buy here you can effect savings up to 40%. They will trade new chairs for old and will take any old furniture in on trade for new and give you exceptionally good values.

In this review we are glad to call to the attention of the public the desirability of doing business with Leonard Beauparlant and to compliment him upon his position in the business world.

GIRL SWIMS FOUR MILES TO CALL AID

Exhausted After Hard Fight With Heavy Seas.

New York.—A nineteen-year-old girl swam four miles through heavy seas to summon aid for her sweetheart and two friends who had been thrown into the ocean when their motor launch capsized.

Coast guardsmen and life savers rescued her companions off Rockaway beach shortly before dawn.

The girl, Marjorie Murray of Woodmere, N. Y., was near exhaustion when she reached the beach and reported the accident to Albert Allapach, who had been fishing in the surf.

Miss Murray and her fiance, Arnold McCloot, twenty-one years old, had accompanied Helen McNiff, nineteen, and John J. J. J., twenty-two, on a moonlight cruise in Jancoskie's launch, the Mary Ann. They had failed to receive coast guard warnings that the sea was too rough for small boats.

The boat developed motor trouble, Miss Murray said, and finally the engine stopped. It was tossed about by the waves and water rolled over it, filling the cabin. The men ordered the girls to put on life preservers.

Then a huge wave capsized the 27-foot craft four miles off Rockaway.

An expert swimmer, Miss Murray trod water until a wave tossed her high enough so that she could see the lights on the Rockaway boardwalk. She kicked off her beach pajamas and shoes and struck out for shore.

"I couldn't see my friends," she said. "The water was too rough. I had to take off my pajamas. They were bogging me down. I didn't think I could swim so far."
